Strengthening Our Students' Social-Emotional Experience

Farmingdale takes the stage for Optimal Learning

Farmingdale School District announced today that it is a proud member of the National Center for Social-Emotional Learning (SEL) and is proud to have implemented a social-emotional learning program across all elementary, middle and high schools.

The Region 17 administrative meeting at Stony Brook High School featured a presentation by Farmingdale Superintendent Dr. Robert J. Berman, who discussed the district's commitment to social-emotional learning and its role in the district's overall educational strategy.

Creating an environment in which students can truly excel!

The New York State Education Department will be issuing interim guidelines on social-emotional education in all school districts later this year.
